

Samsung integrates cameras with Sureview software

CCTV cameras and DVRs by Samsung have been integrated into Sureview's Immix control room software.

It makes up part of an ongoing programme between Samsung and Sureview in 2010 which will include a comprehensive family of IP/network products.

Tim Biddulph, an engineer for Samsung Techwin Europe, said: "The hard work put into achieving this high level of integration by Samsung and Sureview's technical experts is more than justified. Installers and system integrators can now recommend Samsung CCTV products to their customers with confidence and know that Immix-equipped central stations and alarm receiving centres will be able to take full advantage of the technically advanced features and functions of our products."

Chris Eckersley, sales director at SureView Systems International, said: "Formalizing our partnership with Samsung comes at an exciting time for both companies and will offer both end users and integrators flexibility and choice for their remote monitoring requirements, as the number of monitoring centers using Immix continues to expand globally."
